HORSES: IN LIVING COLOR* SHOWCASES LIVINGSTON'S TALENT Book Adds New Dimension to Photographer's Remarkable Career

LEXINGTON, KY (October 15, 2009) – Award-winning photographer Barbara Livingston, author of several popular Eclipse Press titles including Old Friends and More Old Friends, has released Horses: In Living Color. Livingston traveled all over North America looking for the most uniquely colored equines and the result is a breathtaking collection of over 175 photos.

Best known for her Thoroughbred racing photography, Livingston displays a whole new dimension by focusing on an array of beautifully colored breeds, ranging from unusually marked Thoroughbreds to paint-colored miniature horses to a brindle-patterned warmblood. Horses: In Living Color also includes the rare, spotted Knabstrupper, whose numbers in the United States are estimated at 100. One painterly portrait captures three white Thoroughbred mares jogging through the brush in Oregon's desert, while in another, a coal-black Friesian mare whose mane nearly reaches the ground, curiously eyes the photographer.

The breeding of colorful horses has increased in recent years, and Livingston's camera recorded Birdcatcher ticks, Bend Or spots, striped hooves, and other unusual markings. Unlike standard horse breed books, Livingston worked carefully with lighting, patterns and backgrounds to create a beautifully artistic homage to the horse.

About the author:

A graduate of Syracuse University with a fine arts degree, Livingston first began photographing horse racing in the early 1970s when she visited Saratoga Race Course. Over the past three decades, her lens has captured scores of champions and classic racing scenes. Her work also has been featured in four previous books, Four Seasons of Racing, Old Friends, More Old Friends, and Barbara Livingston's Saratoga, all published by Eclipse Press. Livingston's work has appeared in various magazines as well, including Sports Illustrated, The Blood-Horse, Newsweek, People, GQ, Cigar Aficionado, and on the covers of Vanity Fair and TV Guide.
